What is Child Abuse?

Generally speaking, child abuse is injury of a child by an adult or older child. It is usually classified as physical abuse, emotional abuse, or sexual abuse. Harm caused by withholding life's necessities—food, clothing, shelter, medical care and education—is called neglect.

What should you do if you suspect that a child is being abused?

Call the proper authorities immediately. If you suspect a child is being abused, you should contact your local child abuse hotline. Generally the telephone number to report child abuse is listed in the white pages under "child abuse". If you suspect a child is in immediate danger, the local police agency should be contacted first. If the suspect is a volunteer, student or instructor of an ATA school or club, notify Headquarters AFTER the police have been notified.

How do I know what my reporting responsibilities are?

People are often concerned about being sued for reporting child abuse. You are not required to know for certain that a child has been abused. All that the law requires is that you have a reasonable suspicion and are reporting in "good faith". When this requirement is met, all states provide immunity for child abuse reporters.

Youth Protection policies and procedures:

1. Volunteers, students, and instructors accused of abuse will be placed on ATA suspension until local authorities complete their investigation. Suspension includes no allowance or participation at or near any ATA school (including their own, if suspect is an owner), club, or event.
2. If found innocent of all accusations, all privileges will be re-instated. If found guilty all association membership will be revoked!
